Why a Noted Forger is Released on His Own Recognizance.

William E. Gray, the forger who raised New York State bounty certificates from $1,000 to $10,000, and was subsequently convicted and sentenced to State prison for ten years for defrauding the Mechanics' National Bank of this city by obtaining from it $30,000 on three of those certificates, was yesterday discharged from custody. Gray was granted a new trial in Apri last, and then released from the Tombe on $2,500 to 1. Justice D nobus vesterday discharged him on his own too guigance. On one following endorsement:

I am decidedly of the one too that no enviction crold now he hat. Use a evidence of the decident's guilty knowledge of the forcer of the document of the total treat and explicit than there and upon the proper trial, should be presented, the presecution would not in all probability, be successful.

My predecessor in office wrote the treator, touching an application for the decident's part in, that if the matters which had been called to his acts than since the conviction had been fail to our the jury the verdict would probably have been different. The members of the jury when convicted him anamentally recomment, and the judges of the superior court, who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judges of the superior court, who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judges of the superior court, who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judges of the superior court, who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judges of the superior court, who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judges of the superior court who constituted the General Term when affirmed the judgment of the Gradon.

For these reasons is the my constituted the General Term when affirmed the judgment of the decease upon his own recognizance.
